FFN delivers the leading youth forum

Seven years of providing an information, training and support service to young people in rural industries has seen the Future Farmers Network (FFN) evolve into an energetic and resourceful company, with 2010 shaping up to be one of the most successful years to date.

Along with increased partnership support and an active and enthusiastic membership following, FFN was successful in receiving funding from the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry under its Next Gen Farmers program to host a two day summit for rural youth groups across Australia, "Youth Agricultural Central...inspiring the networks of today, to communicate for tomorrow" (YAC).

"FFN are proud to host such a unique event, and are also pleased that rural youth groups and industry bodies are as excited as we are about such a fantastic opportunity," said FFN Chair, Mr James Caracoussis.

"YAC is the opportunity for rural youth groups across Australia from both a national, state and regional levels to improve communication internally, with each other and across the industry as a whole."

In hosting this event FFN are proving to be a leader in developing communication channels in the rural industry, expanding on the existing communication opportunities they already provide; monthly newsletters, online discussions, state based emailing lists and strong industry connections.
